Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 12 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Becoming fine into Saturday, but very cold with winds strengthening.

This Evening and Tonight:
Remaining snow showers should soon fade away during the evening, leaving a fine but very cold remainder of the night under clearing skies. A widespread severe frost is expected, especially in rural areas and near snow cover. Minimum temperature -8 deg C (18 deg F).

Saturday:
Fine but very cold to start with some sunshine. A raw wind should pick up as the day progresses, with sunshine becoming increasingly hazy under advancing cloud from the west. Maximum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Raw, cold and cloudy starting Sunday with gales in places, as snow pushes erratically east later, turning to rain and perhaps giving icy surfaces. Markedly milder but unsettled from Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.